Introduction

This booklet is for anyone affected by dementia, including carers, family and friends of people with the condition.

This booklet provides contact details for organisations that provide care, support and/or advice for people with dementia, their carers and loved ones. There is also a description of the services each organisation provides.

These organisations can offer a range of services and advice, including:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>practical care and support</th>
<th>medical advice</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>emotional support</td>
<td>legal advice</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>housing advice</td>
<td>financial advice</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

Most organisations listed provide free services. However, there may be some charges for some services. We have not listed commercial companies.

This booklet does not contain information on dementia symptoms, diagnosis or treatments. For information about dementia, please contact us on 0300 111 5111. You can ask us questions over the phone or ask for our free information booklets.

This booklet was updated in July 2020. It is due to be reviewed in July 2022. Please get in touch if you’d like a version with references or in a different format.
What is dementia?

Dementia is not a disease itself, but a word used to describe a group of symptoms. These most commonly include:

- The gradual and progressive loss of memory and communication skills.
- A decline in the ability to think and reason clearly.
- Difficulties in carrying out day-to-day activities.

Alzheimer’s disease is the most common disease that causes dementia, affecting over 500,000 people in the UK. Other causes of dementia include vascular dementia, dementia with Lewy bodies and frontotemporal dementia.

We have separate booklets about each of these conditions, which provide information about symptoms, diagnosis and treatment. Contact us if you’d like to know more.
Who is a carer?

A carer is anybody who provides care or support for someone who needs help because of an illness or disability. They might be a partner, relative, friend or neighbour.

Many carers feel they are doing what anyone else would in the same situation by being there for their relative or friend. The care they give is unpaid, although they may be eligible for certain benefits. Anyone of any age can become a carer, and there is not always a clear-cut point when someone becomes another person’s carer.

Care workers, support workers and personal assistants are different from unpaid carers. These are people who are paid for a specific service. This might be for domestic tasks like cleaning or shopping, or help with personal care, such as washing, dressing or managing medication.

Caring for someone with dementia

People who provide care or support for someone with dementia may experience a range of different feelings.

Caring for someone can be rewarding; you may be supporting someone you love very much, and may gain new skills and build closer relationships in the process. But caring can also be challenging. At times it may be physically and mentally exhausting, and the needs of a person with dementia will usually increase over time. It’s important that carers access support for themselves and those they care for when they need it and know that they are not alone.

There is a range of support available for everyone affected by dementia, including carers. Usually people affected by dementia have many questions, worries and concerns. The organisations listed in this booklet can help to answer those questions as well as provide support and information.
Finding local support

Your GP surgery and local council should be able to help you find local sources of support.

As well as medical and social care support, there may be other helpful services in your area, such as befriending services, memory cafés and social groups.

National and local charities can provide advice and signpost you to other organisations that can help. Many of the organisations in this booklet will also be able to help you find local contacts for services available in your area.

Help from your local council, authority or trust

In England, your local council has a duty under the Care Act (2014) to carry out, when requested, a care needs assessment to anyone with care and support needs. There is also a carer’s assessment that assesses the needs of carers. You can request an assessment from your local council’s Adult Social Services Team for yourself or for someone else by phone, in writing or online.

In Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, carers and those they care for are also entitled to a needs assessment. In Scotland and Wales, contact your local council’s Social Services office. In Northern Ireland, contact your local Health and Social Care Trust. A GP or hospital doctor can also arrange an assessment for you.

The assessments will find out if someone is eligible and which care and support services they need. Support may include:

- help in the home
- adaptations and equipment
- help with personal care
- access to day centres
- residential or respite/replacement care.

After a care needs assessment, a care plan should be agreed and written up. You can request a copy of your care plan in writing. The local council has a duty to meet a person’s needs when they are eligible, however, they can charge for services.

A financial assessment is used to determine whether charges are made or not. The council should provide a breakdown of how they calculate any costs.

Find your local social services department number in the phone book or online at www.gov.uk/find-your-local-council. The website also has information on topics such as benefits, tax and pensions. Visit www.nhs.uk for details of GP surgeries and hospitals in your area.

Help finding care providers

There are a large number of care providers. Some agencies will offer care through the local council, as well as privately.

A good place to start looking for services is through the Care Quality Commission (CQC). They are the regulator for health and social care services in England. There are equivalent regulators in the other countries of the UK. They publish reports on care homes and care services in the home (domiciliary care), that highlight the quality of care provided. You can search for local care services on their websites.

About us

Alzheimer’s Research UK is the UK’s leading dementia research charity funding world-class research to find ways to prevent, diagnose and treat dementia. Since the charity was founded in 1992 we have funded over £136 million of research.

We strive to raise awareness and increase understanding of the diseases that cause dementia. Through our partnership with the Join Dementia Research service, we provide opportunities for people with and without dementia to get involved in vital research studies.

There are many ways you can help us to make progress. These include making a donation to help fund our breakthrough research, volunteering to help at our events or sharing your story to raise awareness of dementia. If you would like to find out more about how you can help our contact details are on the back of this booklet.
